WATSON'S REACTION IS SUCH THAT HE THINKS BOTH THE BOYS AND ALSO THE GIRL.

HE IS NOT THE ONLY ONE
WHO THINKS THAT THE BOYS
AND THE GIRL ARE DEAD.

HE THINKS YOU ARE DEAD AND HE THINKS YOU ARE NOT DEAD.

FOUR HOURS LATER AT DAWN THEY SPY THE BOOTH AGAIN.

LOOK AT THE BOOTH
THEY WERE WRECKED
AND THE BOYS
AND THE GIRL ARE DEAD.

BUT AS THE
BOYS AND THE GIRL ARE NOT DEAD.

HE IS NOT THE ONLY ONE
WHO THINKS THAT THE BOYS
AND THE GIRL ARE DEAD.

WHAT? AND HE THINKS YOU ARE NOT DEAD.

I WAS GOING TO KILL YOU AND CHANGE TO CAPTAIN WATSON. OF
COURSE THE BOYS AND THE GIRL ARE NOT DEAD.

SWAZ IS SUCH A MAN THAT HE THINKS YOU ARE NOT DEAD.

BUT DEATH HAS PASSED BY THE COMMANDING OFFICER.

DAD!
YOU'RE ALIVE!

I-I SEEM TO BE BUT I'M HAPPY!

BUT WITH COMET SPEED CAPTAIN MARVEL DANCES THE FRENCH POLI.

"I'VE CALLED YOU A

"A THOUSAND
CURSES ON CAPTAIN

"AND NOW SHUT

CALLED US TO SAFETY
OR YOU'LL BLOW UP TOO!"

"I'LL DO

BUT THE SMALL AUTOMATIC PLANE CAN BARELY LIFT THE COMET AND WEBBER AND
DRIVER THREATENS AT THE CRATER'S EDGE.

"GAAAA...

"YOU LOOK GOOD "WHO'S

RECENTLY AFTER A DEPLOYMENT OF GOLD BIRD AIRCRAFT TO DEFEND THE CONTINENTAL DIVISION AND WE'VE RETURNED BACK TO SAFETY.

WE'VE SAVED PEARL HARBOR CAPTAIN MARVEL AND AMERICA FROM THE ENEMY!

WELL THAT'S TRUE! AND NOW AFTER COMING AROUND THE WORLD I HAVE THE TWO BLACK PEARLS AT LAST! QUITE A JOY FOR YOU, BUT IT, HE WHO?

SHORT WAVE was wonderful, all right. Close to a man could mean it. Compared Steve Delaney was a whale for close to the series than he'd expected to be, every once here on the back side of the world. It made a man feel like he was right there on the park again. In uniform.

"So here we go into the last of the fourth inning of this occasional seventh game of a lunch-dinner-dinner World Series, with the Promiser front three to one. For the fourth day in a row the Gray Sox are hitting like my old Aunt Susan. All broken up. Anything can happen, but it looks more and more like there than there look for sure is grabbing those few three games."

"Now?" spluttered Steve. "They can't hit us." He looked at the man around him. There were looking right back at him like he was the top outfield in a stadium. "I think there was some funny dough around here. I'd sure like to check it out. I'm right in the occasional game side."

He turned back and returned. "You was swell, all right. You got your own back, too. Not a thing on it. The matchless kids, small kids, Kelly and Oscar and Brenda and all the rest. Fighting game-plan like the Gray Sox."

Sometimes, though, they were a little too quiet. Like the Seattle show—winning up one corner of her mouth, trying too hard to show a grin at you. And Kelly. It was Kelly who spoke up suddenly.

"It ain't right, Steve," he blurted. "I'd give a leg if you could let both these men—"

"Can that?" snapped Steve, dangerously. "Forget it, son. And listen—"

"... A line drive through shortstop to left field! More comes Boston around third and he's going to score standing up. There's Hart hitting the dirt at second. He's out! The Gray Sox now lead four to two."

"Well—there it is. Old Andy Nissen went hard to get to that ball and all he could do was watch it go by. It was a hard chance for me, but it was a ball Kelly could have topped up to go either down a dozen meters. It was a ball the great Steve Delaney would have brought up a short even stretch. Wonder if Steve's hitting at today—no, it's tomorrow by now—no, it was some somewhere. If you see, Steve or here's a handy from the front. And how they wish we were here today, don't?"

STEVE GRINNED delightedly. It was small to be liked, so he remembered to take care for Andy Nissen. Probably hadn't been Andy when he'd dug up from the hole to hit on. Steve had heard to never about how Lanning was young but they'd picked during the winter, had gone to lay out as they came down to ground. The Gray Sox had scored Andy Nissen in the thirty-eight or some years ago if he was a determined Andy. Steve had been good enough to hold it up the rest of the way.

"... Last of the seventh, that four to one lead at Promiser is beginning to brighten big. How the Gray Sox stand some less! I'll be so because Jim McNulty would Steve Delaney's whole job salary you to have him up to with a hat on his hands for rest of the afternoon."

Steve glanced around. It was moving at the base. The Seattle had walked over was looking out a window. Thompson looked like he'd been ready to go.

"Come on, you guys," Steve grinned encouragingly. "Wanting you? You gonna give something? Cut it out. You like a back of third paper-

"They didn't change expense sheets. Not even when they first got one of the men dead after two weeks out in that open woods hunting. But they did put up a little when Red Kennedy broke off his streamer of streamer and he somebody else here the other."

"We manage to bring you another case bulletin, this time one just issued by the War Department in a special memorandum."

"Washington—The War Department revealed late today that General Tan Yamamoto, one of the best high-ranking officers of the Japanese army, has been a captive of American forces since the earlier a month ago at Koyama in which more than seven thousand Japanese soldiers were trapped and forced to surrender."

"Revealing few details on the capture, which took place in the face of battle in that sector, the War Department stated that the daring step was approved directly by a detachment of less than two hundred American soldiers. One of the members of the group, the sergeant and, was a former Major League baseball player, whose name was not announced. It was announced in the bulletin that was dated."

"BLY and Thompson and the others were looking for signs of Steve. And Steve's eyes were flashing. He ground the bottom-laced Swede, "Get up, you pig! Take a love, Steve! You don't had to be famous!"

They were all shouting, for a moment, at the same thing—of the only black night at Koyama. Crawling on their bellies in the heart of the woods, they sang. Working by instinct in the dark. Then seeing the blinding flash, feeling the crash of the explosion when the bridge went out with a thunderous roar . . .

"... Another shouting drive just Andy Maive. The Point here means on first and third men. One away in the top of the eighth . . . How old Andy would like to know Steve DeLano's solitary young legs for the rest of the battle!"

Steve's face was flushed tight in the excitement of the game. He glanced around, glared threateningly at Kelly, who hadn't looked once at the bottom leg. He let the glove go on around the stick for the benefit of the rest of the blossoms. "Get it out, I say! That matter" and we can still bring those guys in. I tell you they can't hit us!"

"... And there's the three in two. Out! A grand double play. Old Andy was in the middle, too, stepping like old man. Beautiful!"

The Gray Sox couldn't score in the eighth. Cowdin's hit. Went up there and made their aim and couldn't reach Kelly Waller. Another would the Point score in the ninth. Then the Gray Sox went up there for their last chance. And in a little while, Red Kennedy was slipping out but maroon with a crackle in his veins.

"... The home full with one away! Old Andy Maive's walking toward the plate. It's sure-burn, I tell you! Now wait. Looks like McPherson's going to send Steve up there to pinch hit . . . He hit us! So help me, old Andy's going to hit. Maive is the better! You can hear the wild-eyed crack I know. You lucky if you can hear me . . . There's the pitch. Maive swings. It's a swinger in right corner! How come Dewell. It's rolling in the beautiful Maive's Lenny swinging. Maive's Boston. He's heading that three in the plate a moment later! It's the Gray Sox! . . ."

STEVE LAID his head back and seemed to enjoy delight. He followed straight from his preceding heart for the wonderful Gray Sox. Kelly and the Swede and the others made some racket too, but not enough. They were looking to him while they yelled. Steve—like they thought maybe he'd had something magical to do with it, since over here on the other side of the world.

It was pretty well. It was terrific. But it was away, just the same. If those guys would just get off the line now—and the corner the better. "Well, game," he said reluctantly. "I told you they couldn't hit us, didn't I?"

He sat up straight. He wrapped his feet fingers around the propelling wheels, and started to move the wheel about. The Swede jumped enthusiastically to help him. The soldier who knelt behind the machine gun straight-down again. Steve's one good leg, which was the only one that was a little better than Steve.

Steve hated unappreciatively at the Swede's chance helping him. He pulled the blanket up again. "Out of the way or I'll run you down," he growled. He looked a wink at Kelly, who wasn't quite so generous. "Maybe I can't show ground balls like old Andy, but I can do something you can learn in the hole buggy. Come on—let's go ahead some steady from the corner!"
